PRODUCTS

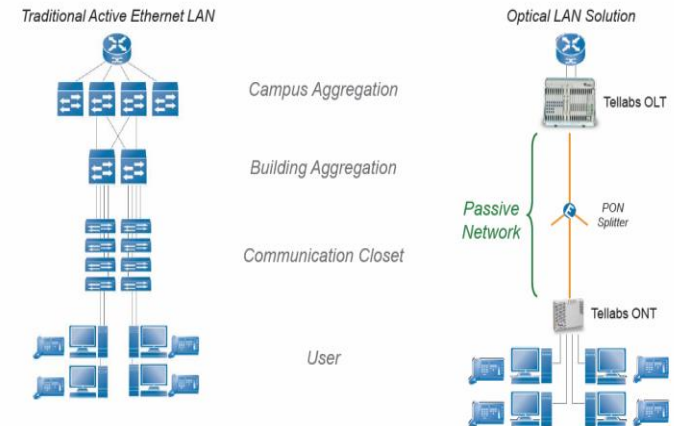

Distributed Antenna Systems

A Distributed Antenna System is a network of antennas connected to a common signal source that provides wireless service within a geographic area or structure. Simply put, a DAS allows emergency responders' communication radios, cell phones, and other wireless devices to operate inside a building where they normally would not work. Jurisdictions around the United States are widely adopting codes requiring DAS in new and renovated buildings.

G Passive Optical Networks (GPON)

Optical LAN is an evolutionary architecture that outperforms copper-based LANs. It converges all information and communication services, including voice, video, data, DAS, security and over a passive optical network.
